1895

The Deshields United Methodist church is a central fixture in the small black community of Copperville. Built in 1895, the single story frame church is dominated by an entrance and bell tower that stands on axis with the gable roof. Topped by a pyramidal roof the belfry is topped by a small tapered wood finial. Colored glass windows light the sanctuary. The most significant interior feature is the allegorical mural painted by Ruth Starr Rose around 1940 depicting Moses parting the Red Sea in an effort to represent freedom from slavery. Also worthy of note is the chamfered baluster altar rail and the beaded board wainscoting. Fixed in the southwest corner of the pier foundation is the marble datestone documenting the 1895 construction year.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Deshields United Methodist church stands on the east side of Copperville Road in the center of Copperville, Talbot County, Maryland. The single-story frame church faces northwest with the gable roof oriented on a northwest/southeast axis.

Erected in 1895, the frame church is supported on a low brick pier foundation, and the building is sheathed with asbestos shingles. The steeply pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Rising in the center of the northwest (main) elevation is a entrance and bell tower topped by a wood shingled pyramidal roof.

The northwest elevation is dominated by the entrance tower and flanking six-over-six colored glass windows. The belfry is finished with large louvered openings on each side, and a tapered wooden spire rises from the peak of the pyramidal roof. Fixed in the southwest corner of the foundation is the marble datestone that is inscribed, "Dashields M. E. Chapel, 1895."

Each side of the of the church is defined by two six-over-six colored glass sash windows that light the sanctuary.

The southeast (rear) wall of the main church is covered with a shorter single-story apse with two different sized windows.

The interior retains some original features including a chamfered post altar rail and beaded board wainscoting around the perimeter of the sanctuary. Plain corner block surrounds trim the window and door openings. Most significant to the interior is a mural painting by Ruth Starr Rose on the back wall of the altar. Painted around 1940, the mural depicts an allegory of Moses parting the Red Sea in an effort to represent freedom from slavery.
